1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Motley (US 6,721,282 B2).

Regarding claims 1, 5 and 12, Motley discloses an apparatus, comprising:

a converting unit receiving a voice signal and performing at least one selected from among analog to digital conversion and digital to analog conversion on the voice signal (column 2, lines 37-56);

a first processor receiving the Voice signal from said converting unit, storing a plurality of procedures, the procedures conforming to predetermined standards of a plurality of voice communication modes, the plurality of voice communication modes including a selected mode, said first processor performing the stored procedure corresponding to the selected mode to cause the voice signal to comply with the predetermined standard corresponding to the selected mode, the selected mode being a mode selected from at least a voice over Internet protocol mode, a voice over digital subscriber line mode, and a voice over multi-service broadband networks mode (column 2, lines 30-36);

a digital tone generating unit storing a plurality of sources of tones for phone functions, storing tones corresponding to the plurality of voice communication modes, generating at least one tone corresponding to the selected mode (column 4, lines 26-38);

a multiplexer receiving and multiplexing the at least one tone from said digital tone generating unit and the processed voice signal from said first processor, and outputting the multiplexed signal to said converting unit (column 16, lines 1-18);

a second processor confirming the selected mode and outputting information identifying the confirmed selected mode to said digital tone generating unit and to said first processor (column 13, lines 33-43);

a relay switch receiving an off signal from said second processor and interrupting a central office phone line when a predetermined code is selected, the predetermined code corresponding to the voice communication modes including digital network services, and maintaining an on state when a general central office phone digit is selected (column 4, lines 26-38);

a third processor being in communication with said second processor, supporting communication during transmission of asymmetric digital subscriber line data, said third processor removing generated noise (column 9, lines 46-50); and an analog front end being in communication with said third processor, supporting matching of an asymmetric digital subscriber line, and enabling bi-directional dual communication of the asymmetric digital subscriber line data (column 9, lines 57-65).

Regarding claims 2, 6, 9 and 13, Motley discloses an apparatus, with said first processor setting a default mode to be one mode from among the plurality of voice communication modes (column 9, lines 57-65).

Regarding claims 3, 7, 10 and 14, Motley discloses an apparatus, with the default mode being determined in dependence upon a call type most commonly used (column 10, lines 30-42).

Regarding claims 4, 8, 11, 15 and 16, Motley discloses an apparatus, said first processor corresponding to a voice digital signal processor, said third processor corresponding to an asymmetric digital Subscriber line digital signal processor, the apparatus corresponding to a composite voice service terminal (column 10, lines 42-65).
